The first week of term three has started on a busy note. The school opened as usual on Monday, however the snow did create some minor disruptions and by the end of the school day we only had around half the children still at school.

At this morning's staff meeting there was a great deal of discussion around John Parson's Cybersafe Workshop which we all attended yesterday afternoon. Hopefully your children will have shared some of the information with you that they learned in John's sessions at school yesterday. Making sure parents/caregivers and teachers are aware of the internet sites the children are accessing, and the information they are sharing about themselves electronically, is an important aspect of ensuring we are keeping ourselves, and our children, safe in today's world and one that we all need to be constantly updating our knowledge on.

If you were unable to attend last night's parent workshop and have the opportunity to do so at a later date, I highly recommend it.
